Real de La Quinta is a prestigious residential country club resort set within an exceptional natural environment, yet conveniently located just minutes from Marbella and Puerto Banús. The resort is surrounded by spectacular mountain and coastal scenery, including views towards La Concha and the Sierra de Las Nieves, and offers a feeling of being immersed in nature while remaining close to the amenities and lifestyle of the Costa del Sol. Sustainability and respect for the natural environment are central to the development. Real de La Quinta was the first project in Spain to receive the infrastructure planning certificate issued by BREEAM, the internationally recognised sustainability assessment organisation. Palmitos was designed by renowned architect Rafael de La-Hoz, with the buildings following the natural contours of the elevated site and maximising the surrounding views.
